

REPLICATION ARCHITECTURE FOR A DIRECTORY SERVER

Abstract

A directory server includes a supplier server, a consumer server in communication with the supplier server, a plurality of pluggable services that manage replication of data contained within the directory server from the supplier server to the consumer server, and a change log maintained on the consumer server of data replicated to the consumer server. The replication of data is managed by the plurality of pluggable services using the change log.

18930_2

FOIA b 7 - D456660